Easter Sunday

Reading I	Acts of the Apostles	10:34a,37-43
Reading II	Colossians	3: 1-4
Gospel	John	20: 1-9

In today's first reading Peter proclaims: "God was with Jesus." God worked in and through Jesus. His very name, Jesus, means "God is our salvation." Thus we might ask ourselves: When we pray or act in the name of Jesus, what are we saying? Are we not saying that we believe in a God who works in us and in the Church too? Christian prayer is always in the name of Jesus. Praying in the name of Jesus does not necessarily mean that we understand all of what God is doing. Rather, it is an acclamation of faith and trust. It is an act of placing ourselves in God's hands rather than relying on ourselves alone. It is a statement of our intention and desire to enter into fuller union with the will of God. As individuals, and as a people, we move toward belief. It is always ahead of us. The Gospel makes it clear that the disciples did not understand the consequences of the resurrection of Jesus from the dead, yet they believed. Our task is to ponder the consequences for ourselves, today. Where are we looking for the Lord? Do we look in the empty tomb, or among the living where healing and reconciliation are happening?

Annual Diocesan Appeal

March 31 concludes the 2012 Annual Diocesan Appeal. Thank you to all who made such generous pledges last year. If you have a balance on your pledge we want to encourage you to send your payment in the next few weeks. At this time we are $14,973.13 short of our goal and we will be required to pay that amount to the diocese at the end of the month. Thank you again for your support of the 2012 ADA. Your commitment to the work being done in our community by the diocesan offices offers support to many.

Did you know…

St. Vincent de Paul Society

In our quest as Catholic Christians to be drawn closer to Christ, those of us at St. Thomas Church are able to do that on a daily basis by being involved through prayer, direct service, or financial contributions to the St. Thomas Conference of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul. Our Conference of about twenty parishioner volunteers quietly answers the calls of hundred of people who have reached out to us for help.

Home visits are an integral part of the St. Vincent de Paul. Those who need assistance are met on an equal basis, never looked down upon, and are always through of as brothers and sisters in Christ. Through home visits, Vincentians determine how individuals or families would best benefit from our services and the services of other social service agencies. Our face to face contact with those in need lifts spirits, renews hope, and draws us all closer to God.

Your prayers, concern, and financial support are the reasons the Society of St. Vincent de Paul is able to provide grassroots support to the less fortunate.

Our next collection will be the weekend of April 6th/ 7th. Thank you so very much for all that you do to help us.

A Request…

A client of the St. Vincent de Paul Society is in need of a washing machine. If anyone has a washing machine that you could donate to this person, please call Mary Cooper at 686-8171.

Alleluia! He Is Risen!

Reprinted with permission from America Magazine americamagazine.org

The Gospels unanimously report that the Lord first appeared to Mary Magdalene following his resurrection. Three of the four Gospels, moreover, maintain that Jesus' first post-resurrection appearance was to Mary alone, and all the accounts include some description of Mary's bewildered, frightened and joyful reactions as well as the condescending dismissal she initially received when she shared the good news with the others. The Scriptures do not describe, however, what happened in the time between Mary's encounter with the risen Lord and the moment when she arrived and joined the other disciples in the upper room.

We can, of course, begin to imagine what those minutes or hours might have been like. We can imagine Mary running, breathless, propelled by hopeful expectation; we hear her heart pounding, almost bursting with joy; we see the tears flowing down her cheeks, past the upturned corners of her ecstatic smile. In those heart-pounding moments, Mary Magdalene would have been the only one who had seen the risen Lord; she would have been the only one in all of history to have heard the good news; she alone was the herald of the Resurrection. Put simply, in those few minutes, she was the church.

When Mary reached the others and announced the good news, the church became, for a time, a handful of frightened believers; but soon they were 100, then 1,000, then 100,000. Two millennia followed, and today there are more than a billion people on five continents, a church of every race and every tongue, yet the one people of God. During her singular moment in salvation history, could Mary have imagined our 21st-century moment? Could she have imagined the world-changing power of her simple message? The world we inhabit, of course, would have been unrecognizable to Mary or any other first-century person. Yet the message we bear is the same; we are heralds of the same Gospel, sharers in the same mission: to testify to the great deeds of God, to invite every person to faith in Jesus Christ.

Our world still needs to hear the Easter proclamation; it longs to hear it, yearns for the freedom it signifies. Yet if our Easter proclamation is to convey the transformative power it bespeaks, then the heralds must be first in faith, repentance and reform. The Easter proclamation is no mere philosophical or theological proposition. It is the beating heart of a living body or it is nothing. Like Mary Magdalene's, our proclamation must flow from burning, faithful hearts. The disillusioned, weary world that waits in the upper room demands an authentic witness, a credibility that love alone provides. The world must see our salty tears, must sense our breathless hope. They must know that we are not simply vain clanging cymbals in the din of modern life, but the heralds of another person, the One who comes to us in the silence, the creator for whom we long and in whom we dare to hope. If we fail to account for the joy that is within us, then we will have failed to proclaim the risen Lord. In the absence of joy, moreover, a joy that only comes from the one who is truth, then all our other truths are ultimately unintelligible.

In his first homily as successor of St. Peter, Pope Francis said that "to walk, build and confess without the cross means that we are not true disciples of the Lord. We must confess the one cross, and in that way we will be a true church." Like Mary Magdalene, our discipleship must be in motion. "Our life is a path," the pope said. "When we stop, the thing doesn't go."

In Pope Francis, it seems, the Lord has a herald in deed as well as in word. His first gestures as pope proved deeply moving to millions of observers; prayers for Pope Emeritus Benedict XVI united Catholics all over the world; then—before he offered the traditional blessing urbi et orbi, "to the city and the world," upon the people gathered below him—came a touching request from the new pope for a "favor," a blessing from the assembled faithful that again united Catholics in a captivating silence. Pope Francis reminded us that our Easter proclamation must not only be heard, it must seen in humble acts of loving service.

This Easter, then, we give thanks to the Lord for Pope Francis, while we also remember that the latest successor of St. Peter is but one among the billions of successors of St. Mary Magdalene. This Easter we once more join our voices with hers, as we herald among the far and near, amid the untold terrors of earthly life, the good news that is the final hope of the world: "Alleluia! He is risen!"
