TWENTY-NINTH SUNDAY IN ORDINARY TIME

Reading I: Isaiah 45: 1,4-6
Reading II: 1 Thessalonians 1: 1-5b
Gospel: Matthew 22:15-21

Jesus' statement in this week's Gospel has been quoted out of context numerous times. Jesus' response to the Herodian sympathizers and Pharisees cuts into the ploy they had to catch Him. Jesus refuses to be trapped by the question. By answering as he does, he demonstrates the relative value of all commitments in comparison to the commitment to love God. Everything else will find its meaning in relation to that. Jesus is not giving a definitive teaching on taxes or government. He is saying that love of one's country and allegiance to its leaders have a value, but a relative one. The value of nationalism easily becomes a vice when it is understood in the tribal sense of "us" against "them."

From the Pastor

After the passage of the Affordable Care Act, the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops expressed concern over the mandates imposed on religious institutions which were compelled to cover medical care that they found morally objectionable. You may have heard of this objection which was litigated in the court case filed by the Little Sisters of the Poor. At that time, Bishop Jenky asked us to pray for the protection of our religious liberty under the intercession of St. Michael the Archangel.

Recently, an executive order has granted relief to religious groups which are now exempt from the HHS mandate that would have otherwise compelled Catholic institutions to provide objectionable medical services, including abortion inducing medication. The USCCB has welcomed this exemption which reflects the long-standing practice that no federal regulation should intrude on our freedom as Catholics to follow our conscience.

However, an executive order does not guarantee the permanent protection of our religious liberty. It may happen that a subsequent executive order or mandate of the Secretary of HHS could impose the same or even more draconian demands on the Catholic Church. For this reason, our Bishop has asked us to continue to pray the prayer to St. Michael the Archangel "for the freedom of the Catholic Church in America and throughout the world." Thank you for your prayerful support, as we all share in the need to vigorously defend our religious liberties and to protect our rights to follow our conscience.

-Msgr Gray
